SECTION A (READING :20 marks)

Read the passage given below and answer the questions that follow: 8X1=8

Till a few years ago, cyclists were a rare sight on city roads as traversing through steep climbs seemed an unimaginable task.

- However, cycling seems to be fast catching up among locals in the hill town. Given the steady rise in vehicle population, it is indeed a welcome change. With more people pedalling their way around the city - some taking it as a form of outdoor physical activity - vehicular traffic is bound to decrease on roads.
- Reminiscing his childhood day when he used to cycle around, Rajat Rajpal, owner of a (3)cafe on the Mall Road, said, "I' ve consciously decided to get used to it. I have been riding my bicycle for five months now and now I'm completely hooked."
- Every morning, Rajpal zealously cycles his way to Company Garden or Camel's Back Road, besides the Library Bazaar whenever he wants to pick up goodies for his cafe. "I think cycling is one of the best aerobic exercises than walking. Besides, you also contribute in keeping the environment clean," said the cycling enthusiast. For some, cycling continues to be an energetic and enthralling experience.
- Norway based Keshav Nrugham, who has been living in Mussoorie for nearly three (5)years, says it's the best way to stay fit and do your bit for the environment. Aged above 50 years, Keshav rides more than 15 km (one way) from Kempty Road till Lal Tibba every morning. Though traffic on the route, particularly around Kempty Road, and the steep climb from Landour to Lal Tibba, pose hurdles on the way, it has failed to deter his spirit. Despite the age factor, he cycles for almost 30 kms daily. Due to the rising number of cyclists in the city, shops have also come up wherein fitness freaks and tourists can take bicycles on rent. "We started renting cycles on an experimental basis but it has become a popular activity now. In fact, there are days when people have to wait to get cycles on rent. We received an overwhelming response from tourists," says Pitambar, owner of a cycle shop.

Sandeep Jain, an advocate from Faridabad, who recently visited Mussoorie along with his three friends, told TOI, "We rented cycles for the entire day and rode to George Everest House and also the Mall Road. It was a great experience."

Cyclists were not so common a few years ago as riding though steep hills was very (a)

- (1) I have sometimes given money to beggars. On cold autumn days, when a homeless man seemed to be in need of some money to buy food or a cup of coffee, I have occasionally dropped him a few coins. Those coins, I have thought, mean much more to him than they do to me, and giving is a nice thing to do. Upon reflection, however, I have come to change my mind, and now I don't give money to beggars. Let me explain why.
- (2) First, for every rupee that we give to a beggar, the more lucrative we make begging and, comparatively, the less lucrative we make working. This is bad, for we want people to work, not beg. Working is productive; begging is at best neutral and often a burden and a nuisance. Second, there is no guarantee that the beggar who receives the money will spend it in ways that increase the quality of his life. He might well spend the money on alcohol or drugs, and end up financing organized crime.
- (3) First of all, you are likely to give your money to the beggars who already get the most from other givers. Depending on their location, their looks, and what they say, different beggars have different degrees of success in how much money they attract. Like everyone else, you are statistically likely to give the most money to the ones with the locations, looks, and tricks that prompt people to give.
- (4) Even if you follow a well thought out strategy to eliminate this problem, however, you are still almost certainly giving your money to the wrong people. The reason why is that, presumably, you live in the developed world and so do the beggars that you walk past on the street. The vast majority of beggars living in the developed world, moreover, have a quality of life that millions in the developing world can only dream of.
- (5) In seeking to help others, we should not merely give to those who are geographically close to us and whose appearance elicits our sympathy. Rather, we should give to those who are the worst off, who can be helped the most with each rupee that we give, and who are the least responsible for the situation that they're in. To achieve this, we should consciously decide how much of our money we are willing to spend on helping others, find the most efficient charity, donate money to that charity, and say no the next time a beggar asks if we can spare a dime.

By mid-April neighbours saw a daily struggle in front of Marcy's house. Out on the sidewalk they saw the dog pull his leash taut, then stand and wait.

- (i) What was the struggle the neighbours witnessed?
- (ii) Why did the dog stand and wait?
- (iii) What was the final outcome of the struggle?

Or

Then took the other, just as fair,
And having perhaps the better claim,
Because it was grassy and wanted wear;
Though as far that the passing there
Had worn them really about the same.

- (i) Which of the two roads did the poet take?
- (ii) Which road, according to the poet, had the better claim?
- (iii) How were the two roads almost similar up to the point where the poet stood?
- Answer the following questions in about 30-40 words each: (2×4=8 marks)
 - 1. How do we know that Lord Ullin forgave his daughter for eloping with her lover?
 - 2. What are the guesses the poet makes with regard to the Solitary Reaper's song?
 - 3. Why was Sudha Murty surprised when her grandmother touched her feet?
 - 4. How does Wordsworth describe the song of the Highland lass in his poem, 'The Solitary Reaper'?
- After Duke's death, Marcy was asked to write an article for the local newspaper. She decides to write on the topic, 'A dog is man's best friend'. Write it for her in 80-100 words.
